

Rolling over

Why rollover to Media Super?

You may have accumulated multiple super accounts over the years. Multiple accounts equal multiple fees. Rolling over, or transferring, your super from other super funds to your Media Super account will help you build your retirement savings faster and reduce the hassle of managing multiple accounts.

Things you should consider before you rollover

- Compare funds – consider the fees, investment options, insurance offer and other features of the funds. When comparing investment performance, be sure to compare long term performance as short term performance may not reflect the overall performance of the fund. For Media Super's investment performance, visit www.mediasuper.com.au/performance.
- Exit penalties and other benefits – note that some funds may charge you an exit fee when you rollover. Once you leave a fund, your insurance cover with that fund will cease. You should ensure that your insurance cover with Media Super is adequate for your needs, before you rollover.
- Check for lost super – if you have changed jobs a few times or regularly work on short projects, you may have lost track of some of your super accounts. To search for lost super, visit www.unclaimedsuper.com.au or www.ato.gov.au/super or contact the Australian Taxation Office on 131 020.

How do I make Media Super the home for my super?

- Advise your employer – contact your payroll or Human Resources department and request a Standard choice form that allows you to nominate Media Super for future contributions. Note that your employer is only required to accept one choice every 12 months.
- Rollover your other accounts – complete a Rollover form, available at www.mediasuper.com.au/rollover or contact us to request a form.
